Some commotion seems to have been caused at Shanghai by the acceptance of the post of Senior Consul by Mr. JOAQUIM M. T. vice. VALDEZ, the Consul-General for Portugal. The duty of the Senior Consul, or of the officer accopying that position, is to serve as the channel of communication between the Municipal Council and the Chamber of Commerce on the one hand and the Chinese Authorities on the other, to preserve the archives, and in general to discharge the functions, appertaining to the leading foreign official in the Settlement. Hitherto it has been customary for the Consuls representing nations with only infin tesimal interests in China to waive their seniority and allow the office to be held by a Consul representing England, Gormany, America, or France, though as regards the latter country objections have been raised on the ground that France has small investors are taking advantage of the prekept her interests apart and not merged sent low prices, as far as possible. them in the cosmopolitan arrangement under which the English and American mander W. THERE is a very sensible article on American silver vote in the last number the Speciator. The writer thus clearly states the difficulty in the monometallic case:-The whole of the monometallist theory rosts on the assumption that there is gold enough available in the If there is not, gold must appreciate, or go up in value, and go up very fast, too, the whole world making a rush to get it. A pig's head, a live fowl, and a large fish were placed before each gun as an offering, in front, of which the superstitious military, officers kow. towed, bespeching the "spirits that guide the aim of the grass to be faithful and true to their guardians in time of war, and not put them to naught in times of emergency by such freaks as bursting from overcharging or heat caused by too rapid firing, &c." After this ceremony the guns were loaded and discharged, and the offer-

We do not say that in time the thing would not adjustitell, for it would even the National Debt: being lightened by conversions; but the time would be very long—thousands of leases, for example, are for sixty years—and the depth of the misory caused in the interim by strikes alone—for the workmen would not understand why their remine!

It is popularly believed here that France has consented to allow Russia to establish a naval station on the French Mediterranean coast, but the question is which port will be given up to ment of Alpes Maritimes, will be given over to the use of the permanent Russian squadron that the Carr intends to establish in the Mediterranean. This, rumour, however, is not entirely scoopted here, and it is a question whether Island, or Biseria in Tunis will be turned there is amule land area on which to erect the buildings necessary for a naval depot, but Biserts which has a capacity for becoming the first stronghold of the Medigterranenn, and which owing to the improvements recently made in its defences by France is already dreaded by fully, would be a grant worthy of France's trust in hor great ally. The joint occupation of Bisarta by France and Russia would compel England to immediately strengthen ber usval force in the Mediterranean and would ultimately compel her to close connection with the Triple Alliance. The above summarises the leagues of space devoted by the newspapers to articles inspired and uninspired arising from the projected visit of the Russian fleet to Poulou next month. The French newspapers serve up the visit of the Czar's fleet as if it was the momentous incident in the history of the Republic
